THE COVER

This is an "old" picture, though of recent vintage calendarwise. If the same scene were photographed today, the Ohio landscape would be literally covered with little pin-flags, each denoting a local organization in the $150,000 Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund campaign. Grouped about the map (left to right) are President John C. Baker; Fred H. Johnson, 20, University trustee and general chairman of the campaign; Prof. Emeritus Hiram Roy Wilson, '96 (MA '97), honorary chairman; Prof. Albert C. Gubitz, executive director; and Carr Liggett, '16, president of the Ohio University Alumni Association. For more about the campaign, see pages 4-5.

WHEN in 1951 ill health forced Dr. T. R. Biddle, '91, to resign as an Ohio University trustee, he concluded a record of service in that capacity that probably will never be surpassed. As a member of the University's Board of Trustees 51 years, he helped in many ways to bring about the growth of Ohio University to its present status. The strength and scope of his contribution to the making of the Ohio University of today proportionately exceed even the remarkable fact of his more than half a century of official service. It would indeed be unfair to Dr. Biddle to appraise his service only in terms of his long tenure as trustee. He manifested throughout that period a truly vigorous interest in the University's welfare.

The University family and friends were deeply saddened by the passing of Dr. Thomas Rollin Biddle.

Said President John C. Baker: "Dr. Biddle's 51 years of service to Ohio University will not be forgotten. We are losing one of our oldest and most loyal friends in the campus community."

WE'RE elated, overjoyed, really wearing rose-colored glasses as we start a new publishing year. Beginning what undoubtedly is to be the most significant year the Alumnus has ever been privileged to chronicle for you--itself enough to evoke editorial ecstasy--we're happy to announce that the Alumnus now has an assistant editor. This of course means, most importantly, a better—and we hope a bigger, eventually, Ohio University alumni magazine for you.

Under any circumstances an announcement of great importance, the addition to our staff assumes, personally, proportions of joy when we can say that the appointee is a man whom we have known since undergraduate days and for whom we have unlimited professional and personal respect.

Grier S. Leach, '48, joins the Alumnus staff with this issue, coming to Ohio University September 1 following a year at Denison where he was assistant director of public information. The Alumnus will have to share his time and talents (he is also to be publicity assistant), but we know that he will provide invaluable assistance in the publishing of your magazine.

A native of Bellaire, Mr. Leach worked as a reporter for the Bellaire Times-Leader, following his graduation from the University School of Journalism. In 1950-51 he took time off from newspapering for a year of graduate study in Latin-American Affairs and the Writing Center at Mexico City College, Mexico. After returning from "south of the border," he served as feature writer for The Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer.

Mr. Leach is married and the father of an eight-year-old daughter.

SCATTERED radio and newspaper publicity given recently to one item in the annual report of the state's annual audit of Ohio University accounts may have caused surprise on the part of alumni who heard or read it.

The key statement was that "Ohio University's alumni fund is out $5,625.80 because 148 former students have not repaid loans." The statement continued with the information that "most of the notes were for money borrowed in the 1920s and '30s, although some are pre-World War I vintage. None is now collectible due to the statute of limitations."

The statements are true as far as they go. What was not indicated, however, was that the loans were made from the Alumni Loan Fund, established in 1907 with gifts from a number of alumni, and that every possible effort was made to collect on the notes while they were still "alive." Friendly requests and, finally, action through collection agencies were successfully resisted by the makers of the notes, many of whom were financially well able to repay the loans. But as the auditor's report indicated, many of the borrowers effectively reneged on their obligations.

In earlier days, administration of loans from the Alumni Loan Fund was in the hands of a single individual, and

Dr. Thomas R. Biddle, '91, Ohio University Trustee More Than Half Century, Dies at 89 After Long Illness

Dr. Thomas Rollin Biddle, '91, life member of the Ohio University Board of Trustees, died September 10 at his home in Athens after a long illness. He was 89. His 51-year tenure as a trustee (1900-1951) spanned the era of the institution's greatest achievement. He served as board chairman from 1935 until 1941.

He resigned his trusteeship two years ago because of ill health.

The noted industrialist, banker, and physician was appointed a trustee for life in 1900 by Governor George K. Nash and served with former presidents Super, Ellis, Bryan, James, acting presidents Chubb and Gamertsfelder, and the incumbent John C. Baker. A member of the committee on buildings and grounds since 1900, he assisted in the building of the modern Ohio University plant.

Dr. Biddle practiced medicine in Athens for 10 years before entering the coal business in 1902 with his father-in-law, the late C. L. Poston. He became president of the Morris-Poston Coal Co., Millfield Coal and Mining Co., Sugar Creek Coal and Mining Co., and of Mine No. 6, Inc., in addition to being general manager of the Poston Consolidated Coal Co.

Active in financial circles, he became a director of the Athens National Bank in 1912 and was made president in 1930.

Born at St. Marys, W. Va., Nov. 27, 1863, he was one of seven brothers who became physicians. He received his medical degree in 1892 at the Medical College of Ohio in Cincinnati.

Before entering medical college, he attended the old Atwood Institute in Albany for two terms. He entered Ohio University in 1883 and was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in 1891. He also taught several terms of school in Athens County.

Prominent in political circles, he was an Ohio delegate to the Republican national convention in 1928, when Herbert Hoover was nominated. He represented Ohio on the notification committee which informed Mr. Hoover of his nomination.

Dr. Biddle's activities also covered membership on the board of trustees at

White Cross Hospital, Columbus, and chairmanship of the Athens County War Stamp campaign and War Chest during World War I.

Oldest of a family of 14 children, Dr. Biddle first attended rural school in Alexander Township where his father, John F. Biddle, was a farmer. The elder Biddle, a Civil War veteran, died in 1923, five years after the death of his wife, Mary Kester Biddle, a native of St. Marys.

Dr. Biddle is survived by his wife, Grace Poston Biddle, whom he married in 1895. Their only child, Clinton Poston Biddle, '17, died in 1939 at the age of 42 while associate dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard.

In 1939, the Biddle family established an Ohio University student loan fund amounting to $5000, in memory of their son.

Dr. Biddle is also survived by three brothers, Dr. David H. Biddle, '15, Athens; Dr. A. C. Biddle, Mansfield; Dr. Benjamin H. Biddle, '15, Lancaster; and one sister, Mrs. J. C. Harner, Athens.

there is evidence that advantage was taken of the faith of the administrator in the integrity of some loan applicants. For approximately the past 25 years, however, the granting of loans has been closely supervised by a committee that has included the Alumni Secretary. Hundreds of worthy students have been aided in financial crises that would otherwise have cut short educational careers. Some losses have been sustained, of course, but the experience at Ohio University compares favorably with that of lending agencies on other campuses.

The Alumni Loan Fund is in no way related to the Ohio University Fund, Inc.

Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund project is prepared for campaign to present Alma Mater $150,000 for scholarships by June of next year

MORE THAN $40,000 has already been contributed to the $150,000 Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund, as 111 local organizations established from coast-to-coast and border-to-border prepare for intensive campaigning. Plans call for presentation of the $150,000 gift in June 1954.

Parents of Ohio University students, who have been invited to participate in the campaign, are responding in gratifying fashion. Contributions ranging from $5-$150 have been received from this group.

Throughout the summer, Prof. Albert C. Gubitz, executive director of the scholarship project, and others from the campus have ranged north, south, east, and west carrying the story of alumni's proposed gift to their University for its 150th birthday.

Professor Gubitz, who recently visited cities in the Rocky Mountain area, the West Coast, and the Southwest, was high in his praise of alumni hospitality to him and to other members of the scholarship project staff as representatives of the University.

Professor Gubitz cited the enthusiasm alumni are showing for the scholarship fund: "All of us going out from the campus to assist local alumni in organizing their particular part in this total alumni campaign continue to find great enthusiasm for the project. Many have expressed belief that it is the greatest organized effort alumni have ever proposed on behalf of their alma mater."

Working with Professor Gubitz, who is director of the University's off-campus relations, in helping to organize local campaigns are Dr. Lorin C. Staats, '26, MA '31, professor of dramatic arts and speech; Ernest E. Ray, '24, professor of accounting; Martin L. Hecht, '46, associate alumni secretary and associate director of The Ohio University Fund, Inc., and F. Patrick Collins, '50, assistant director of off-campus relations.

General chairman of the $150,000 Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund campaign is Fred H. Johnson, '22, of Columbus, a University trustee.

Honorary chairman is Dr. Hiram Roy

Wilson, '96, MA '97, of Athens, a member of the University faculty some 50 years prior to his retirement a few years ago.

Vice chairmen are Mrs. Alice Edwards Wright, '27, of Akron, and Mary Elizabeth Huck, '44, of Columbus.

Invested in the irreducible debt of the State of Ohio at six percent annual interest, the fund will return $9000 annually. This will provide 60 yearly scholarship awards of $150 each.

All contributors to the fund will receive a certificate of recognition signed by the president of the University Board of Trustees, the president of the University, the president of the Alumni Association, and the chairman of the scholarship project. The name of each donor will be recorded in a leatherbound document to be kept in the Alumni Room of the new University Center.

The Bronze Plaque to be placed in the Alumni Room will carry the names of all contributors of $150 or more. Under the heading Memorial Gifts will be names of all contributors of $2500 or more. Under Honor Gifts will be those who give from $100 to $2500, and a third grouping, Loyalty gifts, will include donors of $150 to $1000.

The alumni scholarship fund for the University's Sesquicentennial was initiated by the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association and approved by the Alumni Council at the latter's annual meeting last October on the campus. The Council is made up of representatives of the local organizations of the Association.

Pay As You Like

A contribution to the $150,000 Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund needn't be paid in one sum. Regardless of the size of the pledge, payment can be spread over a period of three taxable years, and it can be apportioned to suit the convenience of the contributor.

For example: A pledge of $2500 (enough to endow in perpetuity a $150 annual scholarship award) might be met this way—$900 the first year, $800 the second year, and $800 the third year.

Or, for a pledge of, say, $30, the contributor may pay $10 each year for three years.

Gifts may be in the form of stocks and bonds or real estate, either as partial payment or full payment of a pledge.

- ONE of the most gratifying developments in the early phases of the $150,000 Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund campaign has been the rallying of students to the cause.
- To date, five student organizations have given a total of $6265.68. Headed by Campus Affairs Committee and Men's Independent Association, each of which gave $2500, the list includes also the Class of 1954, $1015.68; YWCA, $200; Phi Mu Alpha (men's honor society in music), $50.
- Other student groups will join the above in the coming months, for the undergraduate is very much aware of the significance of scholarship aid. He knows firsthand either through his own experience or that of a friend how vital the financial lift of a scholarship award can be.

Ohio Workshop on Economic Education marks second milestone on road to . . .

Economic Understanding

The Ohio Workshop on Economic Education, dedicated to fostering a better understanding of the American economy and a more profound appreciation of it in the schools of the state, completed its second annual summer session at Ohio University.

When the first workshop was conducted in the summer of 1952, it was hailed as a pioneering effort in an often misunderstood and misinterpreted field. At the recent session, aware that they were still exploring the new province of economic understanding, the project's planners and sponsors could look back on a year of real progress.

Primarily, they had set up a permanent Ohio Council on Economic Education, representative of all segments of the state's economy as well as its teachers. Through a field director, Dr. Gilford Crowell, of Ohio University's College of Education, a program for integrating and adapting the work of the annual workshop was being conducted.

This year's workshop was a definite success—and a step toward the ultimate goal. Nearly 100 high school teachers again enrolled for the three-week program. Ohio University alumni attending included:

Mrs. Elizabeth Grover Beatty, '17, Bexley; Mary E. Burgoon, '27, Lima; Mrs. Angie Christman, '26, Hocking County; Gerald O. Devol, '36, Carbon Hill; Rothbe H. Kirkendall, '40, Jackson; Mary Krausz, '36, Portsmouth; Mrs. Viola G. Marshall, '47, Berne Union-Fairfield County; Mrs. Elsie F. Mears,

'39, Crooksville; Eugene E. Nutter, MA '51, Lorain; T. C. Porter, '47, Trimble; Francis J. Smarto, '52, Barnesville; and Nell L. Smith, '35, Newark.

Representatives from business and industry, labor, government, agriculture, and education spoke at and conducted the sessions that packed the three-week period. Underwriting the expense of the notable venture in behalf of more cogent economic understanding were management, labor, agriculture, and private citizens.

The Ohio Workshop (the only one in the state) is sponsored by the Ohio University College of Education and Department of Economics in cooperation with the Ohio Council on Economic Education and the Joint Council on Economic Education.

The latter is a national organization of educators and laymen founded four years ago to foster the workshops on campuses throughout the nation.

Comprising the staff of the Ohio Workshop on Economic Education were C. Don McVay, workshop advisor and Ohio University trustee; John C. Baker, president of Ohio University; George J. Kabat, workshop coordinator and dean of the College of Education at the time of the workshop; M. L. Frankel, workshop associate director and representative of the Joint Council on Economic Education; F. H. McKelvey, workshop director and director of the Center for Educational Service at Ohio University.

E. T. Hellebrandt, workshop economics consultant and professor of economics at Ohio University; George Fersh, workshop curriculum consultant, of New York State Teachers College; John Chalmers, workshop economics consultant, Kenyon College; Fred Picard, workshop associate director and economics consultant, and chairman of the Department of Economics, Ohio University; Gilford Crowell, workshop curriculum consultant, and field director

'fabulous' — but no 'invalid'

HARRY H. PECKHAM, professor of English and one of several OU faculty participants, played the title role in The Bishop Misbehaves

UNFORGETTABLE drama from the set of Come Back, Little Sheba

TROUBLOUS moments from the joyful comedy, The Happy Time

THE theatre, fabled "fabulous invalid" of show business, boasts a robust offshoot in the Ohio Valley Summer Theatre, which recently lowered the curtain on its third successful summer season.

Under the adept direction of Prof. Christopher Lane, also mentor of the Ohio University Theatre, the Ohio Valley "strawhat" troupe presented a variegated menu of theatrical fare, running the gamut from rollicking comedy to poignant drama.

The summer season, featuring six memorable plays running three performances each, opened June 25 behind the footlights of Ohio University's beautiful Speech and Theatre Building. With accent on skillfully blended shades of comedy, the season moved swiftly through The Bishop Misbehaves, Gramercy Ghost, Born Yesterday, Come Back, Little Sheba, The Happy Time, and Suds In Your Eye, which closed out the theatrics August 1.

True to its dictum of "A Summer Theatre In The Valley For The Valley," the talented company was comprised of advanced students in dramatics and patron members from the Ohio Valley. Guest director for the 1953 season was Demarest L. Polacheck, director of the Portsmouth (O.) Little Theatre.

The signal success of the community greasepaint venture is grounded on close cooperation between Ohio University faculty members of the School of Dramatic Arts and Speech, a selected group of Summer Workshop students, and interested Athenians.

"Fabulous," but no "invalid," the Ohio Valley Theatre continues its vital role as purveyor of good, inexpensive theatre for the thousands.

The Communist Threat to Southeast Asia

By Dr. John F. Cady

MOST Americans are aware that the welcome cessation of the shooting war in Korea is only the first of a number of essential steps to be taken before any genuine pacification can be achieved in the troubled Far East. One of the relevant questions which concerned observers have raised is whether the settlement of the Korean difficulty, if and when attained, will only afford opportunity for Red China to extend its military aggression into Southeast Asia, where Peking is already supplying in part the Communist-led anti-French nationalists in Indochina. Southeast Asia would indeed be a prize rich enough to tempt Chinese greed, for it produces almost all of the surplus rice in world trade, enormous amounts of rubber and tin, as well as timber, fibers, oil, sugar, and other mineral and food products. Since the end of 1949, the Chinese Reds have apparently been directing the so-called "liberation" program of world Communism in Eastern Asia. An examination of the post World War II revolutionary movements in Southeast Asian countries adjacent to China may clarify somewhat the current problem.

The Revolt from Colonial Imperialism

The revolutionary attack which Southeast Asian society has sustained since the end of the recent war is by no means the product of Communist influences alone. It can, in fact, be understood only if viewed against the background of the preceding several centuries of colonial rule, which undermined and discredited traditional social structures and rendered them vulnerable to the impact of revolutionary agitation. The colonial objective of developing markets for Western-manufactured consumer goods effectively destroyed, after a time, the basic native industries and handicrafts. Imperial policies subsequently promoted the output on a commercial scale of agricultural and mineral products needed by the economy of the West: coffee, sugar, rice, hemp, jute, quinine, copra, oil, wolfram. By utilizing outside capital, Western technological and governing talent, combined with cheap Oriental labor, the entire economic basis of Southeast Asian society was transformed within a few generations. The area became an addendum to the economy of the Western world, dependent for its livelihood on the export of the relatively few staple products. Population increases, which accompanied the expansion of production and trade, closed the door to any possibility of returning to the largely self-sufficient economies of the precolonial period. Generally speaking, the primary economic objective of European imperialism was maximum profits for the investors with scant regard for adverse social consequences. The results are now in evidence.

Western legal systems, courts, and police control, which were designed to maintain law and order and to provide conditions favorable for economic development, were also destructive of traditional social standards and mores. Parental authority, family solidarity, respect for the authority of the elders, and allegiance to hereditary headmen and to local princes were all undermined. Even where indirect rule attempted to preserve traditional governmental sanctions, as in Java, Annam, Malaya, and the Shan States of Burma, the authority of the native Regent, mandarin, sultan, and sawbwa corroded away. Educational activities, particularly the content of westernized instruction, were usually more disturbing than helpful. The limitations of schooling facilities bred discontent, and the semi-educated youth often became political agitators. At the same time, Western ideas of self-government, social equality, and material well-being permeated the literate minority in all Southeast Asian countries and stimulated dissatisfaction with the colonial order.

The Western impact came also through newspapers, movies, railways, steamboats, bicycles, sewing machines, flashlights, clocks, Western clothing and medicines, and a host of other valued items. But most of these goods were within the purchasing power of only the native elite and the wealthy foreigner. The developing revolutionary movement derived its impetus partly from resentment over the juxtaposition of privilege and denial, poverty and wealth, and also from a growing sense of frustration and insecurity both physical and spiritual. An increasing proportion of the people were conscious of having suffered personal exploitation, destruction of cultural heritage, and spoilage of national resources by the foreign capitalist.

The Effects of the Japanese Conquest and Occupation

The Japanese conquest and occupation of the Southeast Asia during World War II added greatly to social disruption and political unrest. It discredited the colonial powers and intensified the popular desire for independence. It also afforded Southeast Asians an object lesson that will not soon be forgotten in what to expect from domination by an Asian imperialism. Entire populations were subjected to the common unifying experience of privation and resistance to oppression. Trade and economic life were disrupted, while thousands of laborers were uprooted and forced to work on military installations. Successive interregnums were accompanied by orgies of looting and violence; firearms and ammunition became freely available to populations theretofore systematically deprived of such weapons. Finally, the various resistance movements brought to the surface a new youthful leadership which had possessed neither authority nor stake in the older order and was therefore ready to discard traditional opponents. Their steadfast purpose was to transform the impending upsurge of the aroused nationalist masses into full-throttle Communist social revolution. Marxian ideology provided them with an explanation of history, a technique of political organization and control by a self-appointed elite, and a pattern of state-planned economic development which had allegedly enabled Russia to defeat the armed might of Hitler's Germany, and would eventually win control of China.

Western diplomatic tactics immediately following the end of the war tended to play into Communist hands. American and Western European sympathies for Southeast Asian aspirations for freedom and social reform were tempered not only by conflicting individual and national interests but also by considerations of comity and legality with respect to the rights of Western European allies and associates in the war. Thus the American and British Governments conceded independence to the Philippines and to Burma, but felt constrained to be neutral in the Indonesian struggle with the Dutch. In Indochina French sensitivity made it difficult for others to exert any overt pressure in favor of a negotiated settlement with bona fide nationalist leaders during the crucial period of 1946-47 without risking a break with Paris. The refusal of the French authorities to satisfy moderate nationalist demands at the outset threw the combined strength of both the anti-imperialist and the social revolutionary elements into the hands of Communist leaders. American influence in the Philippines was placed on the side of the conservative cacique aristocracy to defeat any immediate prospect of realizing needed agrarian reform.

DR. JOHN F. CADY, professor of history at Ohio University and recognized authority on Southeast Asia, points a finger at a part of the world which may well hold the key to peace or war.

Dr. Cady, member of the faculty since 1949, has held various Department of State posts related to Asian affairs, including chief of the Research Branch for South Asia. Onetime lecturer in history at the University of Rangoon, Burma, he is currently writing a history of Burma, doing research on it through a grant from the Social Science Research Council. A Faculty Lecturer in the 1952-53 series, he was granted a leave of absence last year to accept the invitation of Cornell University to participate as a professor in its Special Program of Southeast Asia studies.

Dr. Cady has written extensively, both books and articles, about his field. Prior to entering government work, he was professor of history and dean at Franklin College, Indiana.

social standards in favor of whatever the West might have to offer in the way of alternatives, whether democratic, fascist, or Communist. Allied authorities returning to Southeast Asia after the war encountered a revolutionary spirit of formidable dimensions.

Character of the Post-war Revolution

The post-war revolution in Southeast Asia was both political and economic. The indigenous peoples were unanimously determined to end Western imperialism and Western interference generally in Asia's affairs. Many of the new leaders were also concerned to ameliorate the lot of the impoverished peasant and worker through land redistribution and by other drastic economic measures. Western capitalism was widely repudiated as being one of the basic ingredients of imperialism itself. Youthful advocates of social welfare also demanded the curbing of rapacious Asian traders, moneylenders, and landlords, who were usually more grasping than the white foreigner.

In such a situation Communist agitators whether inspired from Moscow or Peking had an obvious advantage. Revolution was the Communist stock in trade, and here was a revolt ready-made for them to exploit for their purposes. They therefore actively infiltrated nationalist groups and provided leadership for newly formed peasant and labor union organizations. Communist leaders were usually articulate; they knew where they wanted to go, and they were dedicated to their cause. They also operated according to rules of their own devising which sanctioned double-dealing and subversive tactics distasteful to most of their

The Failure of the Communist Conspiracy

It is noteworthy that the post-war Russian Communist conspiracy in Southeast Asia did not succeed. The only area in which Communists were able to set up a functioning government rivaling the de jure authorities was in Vietnam, and there is reason to believe that this would not have happened if French policy had been more realistic. This Indochina situation has, of course, now been overtaken by events in China and transformed into a problem of baffling difficulty. Elsewhere in Southeast Asia Communist prestige has waned. Basic economic and political problems remain insistent, but they have ceased to be, for the most part, matters of violently revolutionary concern. The survival of democratic institutions in Southeast Asia will depend in large measure on the success of the local governments in promoting social welfare through orderly processes. It will also be influenced considerably by developments within Communist China and by the future tactics employed by Peking in Southeast Asia.

Soviet-inspired political activity in Southeast Asia from 1947 to 1949 failed to enlist popular support mainly because its objectives were Europe-centered. The power position of the U.S.S.R. in Europe was far more important to Moscow than were socialist objectives in Southeast Asia or even the strengthening of the Communist parties there. The orthodox Stalinist view was that colonial rebellion might best serve Russia's purposes by knocking out the investment, market, and manpower props from under Western Europe's "finance capitalism" (imperialism), but that local Communist parties in Southeast Asia were in reality expendable items in the cause of world revolution and the power position of the U.S.S.R. The opportune moment for coordinated action presumably would arise when European rivals of the Soviet Union struggling to preserve their imperial holdings could be challenged by simultaneous attacks from Communist-led forces on both the European and Asiatic fronts.

By the fall of 1947 it became apparent that the anticipated golden opportunity for Communist world revolution was slipping away. Negotiated settlements for the independence of India, Ceylon, Burma, Indonesia, and the Philippines were by that time either completed or well advanced, and the projected Marshall Plan aid program in Europe gave promise of rescuing that area from economic collapse. Southeast Asian delegates attending the Communist-sponsored Youth Conference at Calcutta in early 1948 were accordingly informed that the time for violent struggle had arrived. Within the ensuing six months, Communist armed rebellion flamed in India, Burma, Malaya, and Indonesia, directed not at the imperialist powers but mainly against indigenous nationalist regimes which were resisting Communist control. These risings attained formidable proportions only in Malaya, where the jungle gave protection, and in Burma, where the formidable Karen rising in 1949 afforded opportunity for the Communists to consolidate their power. Both of these were on the wane by 1951. Except in Indochina, where French policy had played into Communist hands, the rebellions were ill-timed and had no chance of succeeding. They did serve to expose Moscow's nefarious purpose to foment maximum disruption within the area to exploit revolutionary forces of Southeast Asia for essentially European ends.

Effects of the Communist Chinese Victory

The triumph of the Chinese Communists in 1949 ushered in a new phase of the revolutionary attack on Southeast Asia. It probably ended any possibility of effective coordination of the Asian and European revolutions on the Stalinist pattern. At the World Federation of Trade Unions meeting at Peking in late 1949, responsibility for the direction of Communist "liberation" activities in Eastern Asia was assigned to China. Mao Tse-tung's peasant-based revolutionary technique was designated as the pattern for local parties in Asia to follow. As the promoter of revolution in Eastern Asia, China, of course, possesses an enormous advantage over Moscow in the fact of geographical proximity. Neighbors in Southeast Asia share China's concern to exclude Western influence in Asia affairs. The 9,000,000 overseas Chinese residing in Southeast Asia are powerful economically far beyond their proportionate numbers, and if Peking should succeed in winning over their allegiance, this group could constitute a fifth column of formidable character. China's military power, clearly demonstrated in Korea, and the alleged economic accomplishments of the "new China" command the fascinated attention of harried governments of Southeast Asia struggling with tremendous problems.

But China faces difficulties as well, and military adventure in Southeast Asia has its hazards. The overseas Chinese are mainly businessmen not Communist-inclined. Leftist leaders within the area are not likely to develop the same Utopian evaluation of Communist China that many of them accepted on faith in regard to the U.S.S.R. Peoples who have experienced occupation by Chinese or Japanese armies, furthermore, are certain not to welcome any form of armed "liberation" by Mao's forces. Even the Vietnamese Communist Ho Chi Minh has promised his nationalist followers that he will never utilize Chinese troops to expel the French. The threat to Southeast Asia is now cumulatively Chinese as well as Communist, and the first aspect of this threat is probably regarded locally as the one most likely to stimulate resistance.

One basic divergence between the political and economic interests of Communist China and the U.S.S.R. in Southeast Asia needs to be underscored.

Whereas Russia's Europe-first policy undertook to foment maximum political and economic disruption in order to destroy the colonial props of imperialist capitalism, China's economic interests demand enhanced productivity and co-operation from Southeast Asian countries as an essential aspect of the economic recovery of the Far East. Peking will, of course, endeavor to eliminate Western political influence from Asia, especially in areas where China's security may conceivably be involved, but hardly at the cost of destroying economic and commercial relations with the West which are essential to Southeast Asia's, and therefore to China's, own livelihood. Chinese military conquest of the area, furthermore, even if it could be easily accomplished, could profit China little economically unless free access by sea to the surplus-producing areas were also assured. Japan found its conquest profitless after its sea communications were severed; and China has no navy. Any overland invasion of Southeast Asia would alienate at one stroke the considerable sympathy which Red China now enjoys from fellow Asians who would like to preserve Asian solidarity against external threat from any quarter including Russia. A more likely tactic on the part of the Chinese Reds is to exploit the so-called autonomous Vietnamese, Thai, and Chingpaw (Kachin) states recently organized within China's own borders as a means of disrupting the unity of neighboring Southeast Asian states. In the meantime, Peking's agents are playing up to non-revolutionary leftists within the several countries. The contest is on, but not on a military basis, and its prosecution has little relevance to Korea.

If the West expects to forestall Communist domination of Southeast Asia, it would be well to recognize that indigenous revolutionary pressures for political independence and social welfare will have to be afforded a constructive outlet. Most of the new leaders are open-minded and will appreciate disinterested help from the West. But pressure for the adoption of international alignments or economic policies which appear to serve Western purposes rather than the interests of the local peoples will not be acceptable. It is, after all, the independence and well-being of the peoples of the area that is primarily at stake, and this alone can provide a foundation for resistance to potential Communist Chinese domination. There would appear to be, on balance, relatively little direct correlation between the ending the Korean War and any immediate aggressive Chinese military action in Southeast Asia.

'Age and Achievement'

Contrary to widespread belief, man's creative candle does not burn brighter with advancing age and ebbing physical vigor.

So claims Ohio University Professor Harvey C. Lehman in a significant new major work entitled Age and Achievement, published recently by the Princeton University press and reported at length in the August 31 issue of Time (page 38).

After painstaking, intensive research, Psychologist Lehman concluded that in most fields of creative activity history's greatest men generally recorded their greatest achievements by the age of 40.

Among the world's scientific giants, Dr. Lehman discovered the bulk made hay in the 26-34 age span. In the arts most composers were at their prolific best from 30-39; poets from 24-30; dramatists in their 30s; and novelists between 40-44. Painters, as a rule, worked their masterpieces from 32-36.

Ohio University's Lehman also debunks the wise-old-philosopher myth. These men, it seems, contributed most brilliantly in their 30s.

Dr. Lehman doesn't profess to know why the creative juices bubble less vigorously after 40, but he suspects there are diverse forces at work—among them the concern with financial security and the wane of physical energies.

But in the words of the Time review, "Dr. Lehman is an exception to his rule. He rates Age and Achievement as his own greatest achievement, and he is 64."

23 Appointed to Faculty

Twenty-three new appointments to the faculty have been announced.

Among the appointments are one associate professor, five assistant professors, one acting assistant professor, 14 instructors, one visiting instructor and one visiting lecturer.

Four of the appointments were in dramatic arts and speech, three each in sociology, mathematics and English, two in chemistry and one each in architecture, design, economics, physics, botany, education, history and home economics.

Named associate professor of sociology was William H. Harlan of St. Petersburg, Fla. He is a 1938 graduate of the University of Nebraska and received his master's there in 1939, earning a PhD in sociology from the University of Chicago in 1950.

Over the past year he has served as a research fellow with the U. S. Public Health Service in St. Petersburg. From 1946-52 he was on the faculty of the University of Southern Illinois.

Appointed assistant professors in the same department were Dr. John T. Gullahorn of Cambridge, Mass., and Helen Wisgerhof Worstel of Athens. Dr. Gullahorn is a 1937 graduate of Southern California and received his master's there in 1945. He was awarded a PhD from Harvard University last June.

Mrs. Worstell holds a bachelor of arts degree from Cornell College and a bachelor of sociological administration from Western Reserve. She taught at Western Reserve from 1941-52 and has served as visiting lecturer at Ohio State.

Receiving assistant professorships in chemistry were Drs. Thomas H. Curry, Yellow Springs, Ohio, and Robert K. Ingham, Bristol, Va. Dr. Curry is a graduate of Purdue University in chemical engineering and received his PhD in organic chemistry at Ohio State this year. He taught at Antioch College from 1950-52.

Dr. Ingham received his AB degree from King College and his PhD from Iowa State in 1952. He was an instructor at Iowa State from 1948-52.

Named assistant professor of mathematics was Dr. William T. Fishback, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, a 1943 graduate of Oberlin College. He earned his master's in 1947 from Harvard and his PhD there in 1952. He has been on the faculty of the University of Vermont since 1950.

Gordon Wiseman, instructor in speech at Ohio University from 1949-52, was appointed acting assistant professor of dramatic arts and speech. He holds a bachelor and master's degree from Indiana State Teachers College.

Of the 14 instructors appointed, five hold Ohio University degrees. They include:

Rosemary Bernard, '50, (master's degree U. of Illinois '52), of New Vienna, dramatic arts and speech; Archie M. Greeb, '49, of Cleveland, dramatic arts and speech; James T. Shipman, '51 (MS '53), of Athens, physics; Robert L. Shrigley, '53, of Corning, education; and Donald O. Roberts, MFA '53, of Athens, design.

Grad Named Press Head

Richard L. Bitters, '50, has been appointed director of press relations for Ohio University.

He succeeds Emerson S. (Vic) Sherow, '29, who has accepted a position as managing editor of the Gallipolis (O.) Tribune (daily), and the Gallia Times (weekly).

Mr. Bitters is a graduate of the Ohio University School of Journalism, and for the past two years has been employed as staff writer for the Columbus Dispatch.

MR. BITTERS

He served as city editor of the Van Wert Times Bulletin before joining the Dispatch and edited the Wapakoneta Daily News before entering Ohio University in 1948. He also worked for the Lima News for a short time before entering the Army for 18 months service in 1945.

The 26-year-old ex-newspaperman is married and has a son, 3, and a daughter, one. Both he and his wife are natives of Wapakoneta.

Married before coming here as a student, he completed his degree work in less than two and one-half years. He also edited the Ohio University Post, served as president of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, and received an award as the outstanding male graduate in his journalism class.

14 Receive Promotions

Fourteen members of the Ohio University faculty received promotions in rank at the beginning of the 1953-54 academic term.

Named to full professor were Dr. Elizabeth G. Andersch, dramatic art and speech; Dr. Victor Goedicke, mathematics; and Dr. John A. Leavitt, finance.

Advanced from assistant to associate professors: Dr. Ernest M. Collins, government; Dr. Frederick D. Kershner, Jr., history; Dr. David Levinson, economics; F. Theodore Paige, industrial arts; Dr. Charles A. Randall, Jr., physics; Dr. Eric Thompson, English; and A. T. Turnbull, MS '49, journalism.

Former instructors promoted to assistant professor are Dr. Harry B. Crewson, economics; Burton W. DeVeau, agriculture; Dr. Willard H. Elsbree, government; and Eugen Jennings, piano.

Voigt Hall

A new girls' dormitory to be called Voigt Hall will be erected at Ohio University in tribute to a woman who served the institution faithfully and well for nearly 40 years.

Named in honor of the late Dean Irma E. Voigt, the proposed $600,000 Georgian-colonial style structure will house 160 girls. Construction bids were opened August 1 and, if satisfactory, work on the building will begin approximately October 15. Target date for completion is the fall of 1954, when Ohio University's Sesquicentennial observance will reach its zenith.

Voigt Hall will be located next to Howard Hall on South College Street. Four cottages which now occupy the new dorm site—Preston, Beckley, Williams, and Shannon—will be razed to make way for the latest landmark in the University building program.

In designating the name, Voigt Hall, the board of trustees took cognizance of a woman whose death last May 9 was described as "the passing of a great era," by President John C. Baker.

Dr. Voigt was dean of women from 1913 to 1949.

Construction of a new dormitory will help meet the growing need for women's housing. The four girls' dorms now in use house 865. In addition, 55 women are quartered on the top floor of the new Ohio University Center which opened in September. Others will room for a semester in the Temporary Office Building which was recently vacated.

Both this structure and the Recreation Building will be torn down next year. With its activities now moved to the University Center, the Rec building will house men students temporarily during the fall semester.

To meet the need for men's housing,

ABOUT THE GREEN

the University is building new dormitories on East Green. Two are now being built, construction of two more is scheduled for next fall. With Johnson Hall (first East Green dorm, opened in 1952), Scott Quad, and the four new dorms, the University will then have dormitory housing for more than 1300 men.

Workshops Featured

The workshops, clinics, special classes, and conferences continued to grow in importance as a part of the recent Summer Session.

The 1953 program saw some 1000 enrolled in the 17 activities falling under the above classifications.

Record enrollments were posted by several groups. The School of Journalism's weeklong Workshop in High School Publications had 453 participants from 142 schools. This was a 53 percent increase over 1952 in the number enrolled, and a 57 percent increase in the number of schools represented.

Enrollment records toppled or were approximated throughout the program. And in all the workshops and related activities there was qualitative as well as quantitative progress.

Varying in length from a few days to three weeks, the special activities included: Workshop in Summer Theatre; Music Clinic Workshop for high school students; Workshop in Radio for high school students; Workshop in Forensics for high school students; Travel-Study Program in Europe; Workshop in School Lunch Management; Workshop in High School Publications.

Ohio Workshop on Economic Education; Special Painting Classes (two different periods); Workshop in Clothing; Workshop in Conservation Education; Opera Workshop; Elementary Teachers Music Workshop; Driver Education Training Course; and Workshop in Elementary Education.

Opera Workshop Award

Its second Annual Summer Opera Workshop a huge success, the Ohio University School of Music has already announced prize competition for a new American opera which will be premiered next summer, climaxing the 1954 workshop session.

The award will take the form of a $250 prize. The composer, if living in this country, will also receive an all-expenses-paid invitation to the University campus for the presentation of the opera, which must be based on an American subject.

The competition is open to any American citizen, with the exception of GLADYS ROCKMORE DAVIS was the first of two noted artists to conduct Special Painting classes on the campus this past summer. She was followed by Charles Burchfield, who made his second guest appearance at Ohio University. The distinguished artists met enthusiastic classes, made up of students of varying ages and interests (left) for two 11-day periods

Ohio University faculty members. One or more works may be submitted, provided there has been no complete performance previously on any stage. The 1954 workshop staging must be a "first."

Requests for application forms and additional information should be addressed to Hollace E. Arment, School of Music, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio. Charles Hamm, 27-year-old Virginian and faculty member of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, won the 1953 award for his original work, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty." Its production, which culminated the workshop, July 20-31, was under the direction of Arment, visiting lecturer in musicology.

Faculty on WLW-TV

The role of the fine arts in the everyday life of every American community was unfolded by a quartet of Ohio University faculty members during the "For Every Man" program on the WLW television network July 25.

The program, produced by James Bruce (James K. Petersen, MA '49) was aired by all three WLW outlets, including Channel 4, Columbus; 5, Cincinnati, and 2, Dayton, with the program originating from the Cincinnati studios.

Representing the University on the program were Vincent Jukes, '30, director of University radio and now director of the University's Sesquicentennial observance during 1954; Dr. Claude Kantner, director of the School of Dramatic Art and Speech; L. C. Mitchell, director of the School of Painting and Allied Arts, and Dr. Karl Ahrendt, director of the school of Music.

HOLLACE ARMENT (standing), visiting lecturer in musicology, directed the production of the 1953 opera. Musical conductor was Charles Minelli (seated), OU band director

MILTON CANIFF, well known comic strip artist (creator of Terry and the Pirates and, more recently, Steve Canyon) showed the young journalists at the School of Journalism's Workshop on High School Publications how comic strips are done and how they might use them

Lend-Lease in Reverse

American graduate students wishing to study at a British University may apply for the Marshall Scholarships, a series of awards available for the first time in the academic years of 1954-55.

The awards are being established by the British Government as a gesture of thanks for Marshall Aid.

Twelve scholarships will be granted annually, each for a two-year period which may be extended to three. Eligible for competition are United States citizens, men or women under the age of 28, graduates of accredited United States colleges or universities. The scholarships may be held at any British university.

The value of each award will be 550 pounds sterling a year, with an extra 200 pounds a year for married men. Transportation will be provided from home to the British university and back.

Qualifications for the awards are distinction of intellect and character, as shown by scholastic attainment and other activities and achievements. Preference will be given to candidates who combine high academic ability with the capacity to play an active part at the university of their choice.

Applications for the 1954-55 scholarships must be made by November 1, 1953. Further information may be obtained from British Information Services, (Education) 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N. Y.

Miss Willanna Riggs, former house-mother of Boyd Hall for 35 years, died July 9 in Columbus.

No Vacation Work Permits

A longer Christmas vacation for everybody but no work permits for anyone are the results of Administrative Committee and Faculty Advisory Council action last spring. The directive states that "Christmas vacation begin no later than December 17 in any year and that no work permits be granted." This year's Christmas vacation beginning date has been changed from December 19 to December 16.

VA Music Head Visits OU

Leonard Quinto, chief of music services for the Veterans Administration, spent a week this summer observing Ohio University's classes in music therapy. A highlight of Mr. Quinto's visit was a trip with the classes to the VA Hospital at Chillicothe to study and participate in the music therapy program there which is headed by William Goodell, '51, MS '52.

By Dawn's Early Light

When Coach Carroll Widdoes decided to put his football squad back on regular 9 a.m. drill schedule following the letup in the recent Athens heat wave, it seems the busy mentor informed everyone of the change but trainer Fred Schleicher, '47.

The change was effective on a Tuesday morning, and who should wander onto the practice field in the dim light of early morning? Yep, Schleicher - training kit in hand.

The Bobcats had been rising at 5 a.m. and starting drills at 6.

C. HARTLEY GRATTAN of the Ford Foundation's Fund for Adult Education, Southwest Pacific expert, was a featured speaker at the University's eighth Annual Summer Conference on Current Problems and World Affairs. The conference, headed by Dr. Frederick D. Kershner, Jr., associate professor of history, also heard George R. Laking, New Zealand's consul-general in the United States and veteran official

Summer Grads Number 167

Ohio University graduated 167 at the annual summer term Commencement exercises August 9 in the Alumni Memorial Auditorium.

Dr. Lloyd L. Ramseyer, president of Bluffton College and vice president of the Ohio College Association, delivered the address on "The Fine Art of Understanding."

Underlining our deficiencies in the social realm, Dr. Ramseyer called for a concerted effort in learning to understand and get along with each other. This, he expanded, is infinitely more important than the need for free-wheeling technological advance.

"It is folly to help people to live longer unless they can also live better," he emphasized. "We need to understand their motives, their desires, the tools which can be used in bringing about agreement between individuals, and learn to detect and avoid those things which bring about division and conflict."

Dr. Earl C. Seigfred, chairman of the administrative committee and dean of the College of Fine Arts, presided and directed the awarding of degrees in the absence of President John C. Baker.

Dr. Horace T. Houf, professor of philosophy, served as chaplain-of-the-day.

In his Commencement address, Dr. Ramseyer named four barriers which block individual understanding. The first emphasized was the difficulty that people have in securing accurate information. Beclouding the true picture, he claimed, is the circulation of purposely or unintentionally biased information.

The second barrier, he continued, is that of language.

"Our difficulty is to get our people to see any need for studying languages," Dr. Ramseyer said. "Visitors to a foreign land find it difficult to get a true impression through interpreters or in speaking only with those who have an understanding of English."

Difference in custom is another impediment, the speaker explained. He decried the tendency toward unfavorable comparisons of differing sets of customs, and underscored that "things can be different without any absolute value comparison."

Last of the barriers discussed by Dr. Ramseyer was illiteracy. There are a billion people in the world who cannot read or write, he pointed out, and consequently they can share no ideas through books.

The speaker concluded:

"The art of understanding is not a substitute for knowledge and skills . . . but unless you cultivate such an art, you may be of greater harm than good because of the education which has been yours."

Union Summer Schools

Ohio University was host to two trade union summer schools in August, those of UAW-CIO's Region 2A and the Ohio CIO Council.

The UAW-CIO school was held the week of August 9, attended by some 125 representatives of local units of the union from southern Ohio, West Virginia, and western Pennsylvania. Heading up the meet was Eugene D. Souders, education director for Region 2A.

Instructors and evening speakers were supplied by the international office of the union. Classes covered collective bargaining, legislation, effective speech, press and publicity, and related subjects.

Speakers included Emil Mazey, secretary-treasurer of the International Union; Ray Ross, director of Region 2A; Brendan Sexton, director of education, International Union; and Roy Reuther, co-director of the Political Action Department, International Union.

Following the autoworkers' school was that of the Ohio CIO Council, which lasted a week and enrolled 235. While most of the instructors were union leaders, the list also included:

Dr. Dave Levinson, associate professor in the Department of Economics, who conducted a class on Economics and Workers; Maurice F. X. Donahue, acting dean of the University of Chicago's University College; John P. Caldwell, director of the Union Education Service at the University of Chicago; and Charles Lucas, executive secretary of the Cleveland Chapter of the NAACP.

Jacob Clayman, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio CIO Council, also taught a class at the summer school which was headed by Orville Jones, director of education for the Ohio CIO.

THE CONCERTS of the Music Clinic-Workshop for High School Students was a popular feature of the Summer Session. The workshops again proved to be highly important in the summer program

Ohio University's Sesquicentennial

ALUMNI MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM

UNIVERSITY CENTER

EDWIN WATTS CHUBB LIBRARY

ORDERS are now being taken for delivery of the Ohio University Wedgwood. Commemorating the sesquicentennial of the university, the edition offers six Lincoln-shaped plates (each bearing a beautifully-executed illustration of a scene on the campus), each bearing a beautifully-executed illustration of a scene on the campus. The plates may be ordered in any number from one to six, or as a single plate, or any part of six. Delivery will be made as soon as possible.

ALL plates are circumscribed by the decorative border designed by Miss Edna Way, professor of Art. The center sketch and the design of the border are in Ohio University's possession. The original order of 3600 plates has been reduced to 1000 productions of each scene. After this order is filled, no more deliveries before next April.

THE six commemorative plates are only part of the Ohio University Wedgwood ware developed for the Sesquicentennial. Other plates for sale early next year are the Founders cup, the Cutler on one side and Rufus Putnam on the other, the Ohio University border; and a cream and sugar plate with a modified border motif.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the sale of these plates will appear in a later issue of the Alumnus.

Expert Forecasts Successful Season for '53 Bobcats

The Bobcats trounced Toledo U. 26-0 in their opening game of the 1953 football season at Toledo.

If the September song of the pigskin prophets echoes through cold November, the Ohio University footballers are ticketed for even better things in '53 than last season when they posted a distinguished 6-2-1 battle record.

At least those are the lyrics penned by veteran scribe Francis Wallace in his annual preview piece for Colliers, where he forecasts seven wins and two losses for the current edition of Coach Carroll Widdoes' Bobcats.

The experts, whose pre-season brainstorms give the coaches those recurrent Saturday headaches, prophesy a stronger OU aggregation this season, rating the Widdoes' huskies Number Two in the rugged Mid-American Conference scramble, behind vaunted Miami University.

With 20 tested lettermen to flesh out the grid unit, prospects have a rosy tint. But if Coach Widdoes is to make honest citizens out of the sports page speculators, there are several problems to be stiff-armed.

The backfield picture is on the lush side, but the forward wall, left with gaping holes by graduation, definitely needs bolstering. Especially sensitive are the tackle spots, where commencement claimed Vince Costello, All-Mid-American Conference selection, and his cohorts John Turk and Elmer Apel. Both Costello and Turk doubled as defensive linebackers.

To fill these vacancies, Widdoes may call on a pair of juniors with limited experience last year, Stan Maschino and Sam Greiner. Or the personable coach may look to comers from the 1952 frosh team. At any rate, the positions are wide-open and will have to be won.

Pivoting the ball for the Green and White will be veteran center Lowell Anderson, three-letter winner and captain-elect of the 1953 team. The 195-pound senior can work both ways for the Bobcats and has been one of the most consistent players in the past.

Returning to regular guard positions will be Senior Bob Penrod and Junior John Schwab. Both are rugged, explosive performers with plenty of speed.

Back to hold down flanking positions will be veterans Lou Sawchik and Frank Underwood. Sawchik led the Bobcats last year in pass receiving, snaring 27 aeriads good for 472 yards and 4 touchdowns. He was rated among the best at his position in the MAC.

The backfield, which should be one of Ohio's best in recent years, will be

Cutler Kin Wins Award

A direct descendant of Manasseh Cutler has been awarded the Athens County Sesquicentennial Scholarship dedicated in his name.

Winner of the award, a $150 scholarship to Ohio University this fall, is Maureen Kelley, of Nelsonville, who is a great-great-great-great granddaughter of the Ohio pioneer, through his oldest son, Ephriam Cutler.

The endowed scholarship will receive an annual interest return of $150 on its $2500 investment in the irrevocable debt of the State through the agency of The Ohio University Fund, Inc. It was an Athens County project in connection with the Sesquicentennial of the State of Ohio. A total of $2650 was subscribed to the project, $150 to pay for this year's award, the rest to be invested to provide subsequent annual awards.

Miss Kelley, who was selected by the University Scholarships Committee, is the daughter of Mrs. Rebecca Kelley and the late Harry R. Kelley.

The choice was made after the Athens County committee had drawn York Township by lot as the first of the county's 14 townships to be awarded a scholarship. The other 13 townships are to follow in alphabetical order, one each year.

'A Rose by Any Other'

After studied deliberation due the christening of a long-awaited son, the University's new architectural offspring has been officially named the Ohio University Center.

With the concern of a doting father, the board of trustees considered several cognomens before reaching their decision. Realizing that the million-and-a-half-dollar building would be used extensively by the faculty, the board agreed the assumed title of Student Center was a misnomer.

An early suggestion that the structure be called the Ohio University Union reportedly evoked an indignant letter from a parent who "didn't want her daughter joining any unions."

Anyhow, the name is now Ohio University Center—an apt name for a favorite son.

State Votes $6,809,406 for 1953-55 Operations

Below is the tabulation on State funds appropriated to Ohio University for the next biennium, with the sums asked to operate the University in the two-year span and the appropriations for the 1951-53 period. Newcomb Grant Announced

An Alice Newcomb Memorial Scholarship has been established in the speech department at Ohio University.

The scholarship was established by Athens County Probate Judge and Mrs. John F. Newcomb, in memory of their daughter, Alice, who died Jan. 29, 1952, while in her sophomore year as a speech major at Ohio Wesleyan University.

First to receive the $150 scholarship for two semesters of study is Barbara Williams, sophomore majoring in speech correction, and daughter of Alumni Secretary Clark E. Williams, '21, and Mrs. Williams (Marie Jewett, '22, MA '29).

The recipient, selected by the University Scholarships Committee, must be a major or minor in speech and of at least sophomore rank. First consideration is to be given graduates of Athens High School. If there are no eligible applicants, then a graduate of any high school in Athens County may be considered. Finally, if no Athens County applicants are available, any other student who meets the requirement may be considered.

Miss Newcomb was a 1930 graduate of Athens High School and had completed nearly three semesters of study at Ohio Wesleyan.

Sudnick Named to New Post

Edward A. Sudnick, '50, has been named director of Student Financial Aids, a new office recently created by the University, encompassing scholarships, loans, and part-time employment.

The Clevelander previously served as head of residence at Scott Quadrangle and assistant to the Dean of Men. Mrs. Sudnick is the former Elaine Ross, '52.

9 Students to Study Abroad

Nine Ohio University students are studying in France and Spain during the 1953-54 academic year under the exchange program arranged by the College of Education and the Department of Romance Languages.

These students will study in Paris, Nice, and Madrid. On completion of their work abroad they will receive a year's academic credit.

Participating in the program are Barbara Ann Beard, Canfield; Miriam Joan Boyd, Warren; James Deal, Hebron; David Dickens, Buffalo, N. Y.; Virginia Haskins, Pomeroy; Loretta Kulesavage, Dunellen, N. J.; Jean Marie McClane, East Liverpool; Yvonne Sherow, Athens; and Janet Wassum, Harmony, Pa. An equal number of French and Spanish students are on the campus this fall completing the exchange.

Letter from Liggett

Dear Fellow Alumni:

I hope you've all had a wonderful summer. I got through the heat and humidity pretty well by avoiding all exercise, especially golf in the hot sun, by well planned use of cooling liquids, and by reducing my workday from eighteen to fifteen hours. I can recommend all of these methods. I enter the fall season not much worse off than I was at Commencement time in June.

Quite a number of my friends have mentioned warmly to me what my dear old pal Professor Mackinnon refers to as the "special Liggett issue" of the Alumnus which came out during the summer. They tell me I shouldn't be embarrassed, inferring that I must have got my money's worth. This outrageous slander on both Bob McCreanor and me we both resent violently. We are consulting our lawyers and some of you will be hearing from them soon. We are advised, however, to make no further statements at present.

You'll be pleased to hear that the Alumnus won a very handsome honor last July in the annual judging of association publications by the American Alumni Council. In Ohio University's group (10,000 to 20,000 alumni) it received the only Honorable Mention under the heading of "Intellectual Stimulation." Knowing that the magazine won this honor in spite of my letters, I congratulate the editor in your behalf. Among all Ohio colleges only Case, Ohio State and Ohio University won any awards.

As you read this, we're all back from the Harvard football game, and the campaign for the Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Fund moves into high gear. You can do nothing more essential these next weeks than to give generously of your time and money to this wonderful project, our part in Alma Mater's 150th birthday celebration—and tremendously important to thousands of worthy young students over the years ahead. I ask your enthusiastic cooperation with Fred Johnson, general chairman, and Al Gubitz, executive director. You'll be well repaid in the satisfaction of a worthwhile job well done.

I'll be seeing you at Homecoming!

Sincerely,

President, Ohio University Alumni Association

The June Cover

Looking at the cover of the June, 1953, issue of your wonderful publication, I was immediately amused, yet disheartened at the glum, pessimistic countenances of most of the members of the faculty.

Granted it is difficult sometimes to smile in these uncertain days, but shouldn't college professors with their supposedly broad, encompassing, world-wide outlook have a more optimistic, glad-to-be-alive appearance, or was it the Athens sun and heat that made most of the mouths drawn and eyebrows distorted . . . ?

Dean Voigt Article

The article on Dean Voigt in a recent issue (May, 1953) of the Alumnus was certainly very interesting and well written. The persons concerned are to be congratulated on writing such a wonderful article in tribute to Dean Voigt. (All credit to Prof. C. N. Mackinnon of English, Ed.)

From time to time we meet some of the older alumni of Ohio University who have lost contact with the school, and we pass along the Alumnus to them to read. All of them were sorry to hear of Dean Voigt's death, and very much impressed by the tribute paid to her.

Tri-State Alumni Picnic

A summer highlight along the alumni news front was a highly successful basket picnic for alumni and their families from the Tri-State area, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Club.

The outing was held July 18 at Fort Pitt Grove, South Park, Allegheny County, Pa., from 2 p.m. until dark. Tip-top attendance marked the event, attended by alums from Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

Featured on the agenda at the OU conclave were swimming, horseshoes, softball, children's games, golf, tennis, and a large portion of fellowship and relaxation.

Alums Tell OU Story

The St. Louis Club's big project is the telling of the Ohio University story to high school students in the St. Louis area.

Proof of this activity is offered in the picture at left. The picture, showing Carolyne Christy Covert, '30 (wife of M. C. Covert, '29) presiding over the Ohio University display at Kirkwood High School, first appeared in the Kirkwood High yearbook.

Harley Swartz, '24, worked with Mrs. Covert at Kirkwood, and some eight similar teams covered other high schools in Greater St. Louis last spring.

Lt. Miller Killed in Korea

Lt. Carleton A. Miller, '52, was killed in action July 3, about three weeks after his arrival in Korea and three weeks before the signing of the truce. Lieutenant Miller, 22 years old, received his Bachelor of Science in Commerce degree in June 1952, and was commissioned in the Regular Army at that time.

Before going overseas in May of this year, he had been stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., and Fort Campbell, Ky. He joined the 25th Infantry Division in Korea after a short time in Japan.

Born in Sidney, Ohio, he is survived by his wife, LaVonne; parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Miller; a brother, Norbert, currently a student at Ohio University; and two sisters, Mrs. Mark Hentrich and Mrs. Henry Easton.

Boyer Gets Air Medal

For flying four combat missions in Korea during a single 24-hour period, Lt. Wallace R. (Dick) Boyer, '51, was recently awarded the Air Medal.

The former Ohio University footballer is a B-26 bomber pilot, and has served in Korea since last May. He is scheduled to return stateside in December.

The 26-year-old pilot has been in the Air Force since graduation. His wife, Elizabeth, and two sons, Richard and Robert, live at 1361 Wilbur Ave., Akron.

Crimi Gets Bronze Star

Lt. Frank P. Crimi, '51, was recently awarded the Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in the Baldy Campaign in Korea.

Near Chorwon on March 25, 1953, Lieutenant Crimi, a member of Company C, 320 Infantry, led a counter-attack on a strategic outpost. The War Department citation reported that with complete disregard for personal safety, he exposed himself to intense enemy fire while directing and encouraging his men. Although wounded in the assault, he remained with his men until the outpost was taken.

He was awarded the Purple Heart, and in July, 1953, was promoted to first lieutenant with a distinguished service record.

After receiving his bachelor of science in mechanical engineering, Lieutenant Crimi was employed as a mechanical engineer by Du Pont before entering military service.

-Deaths-

Dr. J. Homer Caskey, member of the University English faculty from 1930 to 1942, died recently in Houston, Texas. His family resided in Waco.

Dr. Caskey left OU University for World War II service in the Army, where he rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He was discharged from the service early in 1947.

J. S. SHERRARD, '22, Athens banker and city official, died May 26 in Athens after an illness of several months.

An employee of the Athens National Bank 33 years, he had been its cashier since March, 1952, and vice president since last November. He was Athens city treasurer some 30 years. Mr. Sherrard's survivors include his wife, two daughters, five brothers, and three sisters. The daughters are PATRICIA SHERRARD PETERSON (Mrs. Carl S.) '46, of Lancaster, and KATHRYN SHERRARD JURKOVIC (Mrs. William) '42, of Wyoming, Ohio.

DORIS MCGILL KERSH (Mrs. Phillip), '51, died May 15 in Columbus two days after she gave birth to a son. Besides the baby, Douglas William Kersh, her survivors include her husband, a research engineer with the Wayne Engineering Research Institute in Detroit.

IRA J. HOOVER, '21, died in Columbus in June. A lawyer for the Design Service Co., Columbus, Mr. Hoover had served two terms from Stark County in the Ohio House of Representatives. His survivors include his wife and a sister.

HELEN HOLMES EVERETT (Mrs. Edward), '33, of McLean, Va., died March 6 following an operation to correct her failing sight. An active community worker, especially with children and the school, Mrs. Everett had been a physical education teacher and director in Washington, D. C., prior to her marriage. At McLean a memorial fund in her name has been established, the fund to be used in service to the children of the local school. Besides her husband, her survivors include two children, her mother, and a brother.

EARLE A. MILLER, '20, of Logan, died June 23 in Veterans Hospital at Dayton. He had been in failing health for the past three years. Mr. Miller spent most of his life in Athens, but had lived in Logan the past eight years. He was an Athens County teacher some 12 years. His survivors include a son, daughter, and a sister.
